

Anthony Gormley

This is his most famous piece of work, produced in 1998, the Angel of the North, which is a public sculpture displayed in Gateshead in the North East of England.

Angel of the North

It is made from steel, and ~~some~~ copper, and it is 20 metres tall in real life.

Jacob Blakemore Year 3

I made a smaller one out of Play Doh. It was hard to get it to stand up. We had to put cocktail sticks through it to strengthen it.
