

Direct Speech

Part A

Direct speech is where the exact words someone has spoken are reproduced in a sentence using inverted commas.

“Charlie ducked behind the wall, hardly daring to breathe. Had he really just seen Roman soldiers?” the storyteller said.

1. Read the extract below and identify the punctuation that is missing, then copy the passage and punctuate the direct speech correctly.

Tilda nursed her hand and glared at the stubborn framework. This felt like stalemate. Told you it was broken Charlie said triumphantly. The only way you'll ever get through is by kicking the door down. Tilda whirled round and snatched a handful of her brother's T-shirt. Charlie Hacker, you're a genius! Eh? Gimme one of your trainers. What? No! They won't fit you. I'm not going to wear it, silly. I'm going to use it to get through the door.

2. Write your own sentence using direct speech to show what you think will happen next.

Direct Speech Answers

Part A

1. Tilda nursed her hand and glared at the stubborn framework. This felt like stalemate.

“Told you it was broken,” Charlie said triumphantly. “The only way you’ll ever get through is by kicking the door down.” Tilda whirled round and snatched a handful of her brother’s T-shirt.

“Charlie Hacker, you’re a genius!”

“Eh?”

“Gimme one of your trainers.”

“What? No! They won’t fit you.”

“I’m not going to wear it, silly. I’m going to use it to get through the door.”

2. Children’s own responses, including correctly punctuated direct speech.

Part B

- Put inverted commas around what is said.
- Begin what is said with a capital letter.
- Include the correct punctuation for what is said, inside the inverted commas.
- If the reporting clause comes before the speech, use a comma after the reporting clause. If the reporting clause comes after the speech, use a comma instead of a full stop at the end of the speech.
- Start a new speaker on a new line.
